Results Given the fact that Austria does not yet have any national communication partners for the focus areas ICT (IT) and building and construction industry, in-depth research to this effect was undertaken at the outset of the project. The procedure described in more detail below made it possible to identify an appropriate number of people working or having already been involved in developments in the interface area between ICT (IT) and the building and construction sector. As a next step, future research projects and/or themes, designated as "project ideas" in this context, were identified. Further attention was devoted to collecting and processing this information and matching it with the simultaneous modifications of the twelve (eight, resp.) theme-focused roadmaps. Processing of project ideas and targeted contacts with suitable representatives of interests aimed at underpinning the visions described in the roadmaps with tangible references and validating them within the framework of meetings and workshops in support of the projects.
